By Envy's Frowns unaw'd, uncheck'd by Pride,
Still steadily I tread my wonted Way;
Divine Urania be thou my Guide,
And thou, Britannia, approve the Lay:
Sacred to thee these artless Lines belong,
Mine is the Poet's Task, and thine the Song.

1	Δ		8			4 8	9 54	5m26	The chances and changes of this transitory life are so many and so various, that as there is nothing to be depended upon, so there is nothing to be wondered at. The bonds of human friendship, how soon are they broke. This in private life is irksome, but when it becomes national it is of the greatest consequence. A trine aspect of the benign ☉ and the regal ♀, begins the year, and looks well. Again a malignant ☿ of these two planets ends the month, and looks ill. I believe much business is stirring, but I hope I may affirm that the Δ of ♀ ♂ ♀ promises well to the land of our nativity.

10 February hath XXVIII Days.

Avert ye sacred Pow'rs, and keep afar
 From your Britannia's devoted Head,
 The baleful Influence of malignant Star,
 Nor be its direful Vengeance ever shed
 Where Heav'n-born Liberty her Right maintains,
 And royal GEORGE our gracious Sovereign reigns.

Attune the Harp, Oh Muse! and chant the Praise
 Of our great British Fathers, bold and free;
 Who from the Tyranny, and Scourge of Days
 Inglorious, to set at Liberty
 Their future Offspring, bravely made a Stand,
 And banish'd Vassalage out of the Land:—

For this, O Sires, ye great and glorious Band,
 Light lie the Turf on each devoted Head;

 Disturb the peaceful Mansions of the Dead:
 And hourly, while through Life our Vessels steer,
 Let Memory your sacred Names revere.

16 May hath XXXI Days.

Ah! what our Ancestors so bravely won,
 Dearer than Life, be e'er before our Eyes;
 May we pursue the Paths that they have run,
 And bravely keep, or fall a Sacrifice:
 He who for Liberty resigns his Breath,
 Has conquer'd more than Man; he conquers Death.

8						3 8	11 23 39	3 m 40	Here are in this month some aspects of the lenitive kind; such are * 24 ♂, which I look upon as a favourable one to our happy constitution. The conjunction too of ☉ with 24 methinks seems to smile upon Church and State, & apparently portend the defence of both Ecclesiastical and Regal authority, but as nothing is permanent in this sublunary scene, so the sunshine of our hopes is clouded by the malign square of ☉ and h; this may somewhat abate those influences, much to be wished for, yet if, as I think it will be, other nations will experience the baleful effects more than we, let us set our hearts at rest.

No more the tyrant's Curfew's dismal sound,
 The Peasant calls to darkness and to bed;
 Ceas'd are those days; and joyful see around
 The blazing hearth beneath each lowly shed.
 While comfort, peace, and love the bosom fires,
 With all the joy that liberty inspires.

The mist of ignorance to dissipate,
 Learning to us has op'd her ample store;
 And shewn us how ev'n worlds preponderate,
 And old scholastic jargon is no more.
 The qualities occult have ta'en their flight,
 And naked truth has giv'n a system right.

From this blest'd isle now ignorance is fled,
 Philosophy has rais'd fair truth on high :
 And here the arts with genius at their head
 Flourish, increase, and even multiply ;
 Joyous to make Britannia the seat
 Of all that's valuable, good, and great.

26 OCTOBER hath xxxi Days.

While agriculture stores the earth with food,
For Britain's hardy offspring brave and free:
See navigation skim the rapid flood,
From ev'ry foreign land, or distant sea;
While she the wide world's treasure hither brings,
And in Britannia's lap their produce flings.

28 NOVEMBER hath xxx Days.

For thee Britannia, traffic spreads his sail,
And sweeps the sea to every distant shore;
For thee the sturdy peasant quits the flail,
And seeks for victory where canons roar.
When in its cause his darling country calls,
And boldly wins the field, or bravely falls.

Of the ECLIPSES that will happen in the Year 1787.

DURING the revolutions of the greater and lesser lights, the grand ruler of the day, and the serene chearer of the nocturnal hours, within the circuit of the present year, there will be six Eclipses; viz. three of the Sun, and three of the Moon, which will happen as follows:

The first will be a total Eclipse of the Moon, and will happen on Wednesday, January 3, vide infra. D in en .

Beginning - - - - 10h. 0m. afternoon.

Total darkness begins 10h. 58m.

Middle - - - - 11h. 47m.

Total darkness ends - 0h. 37m. morn, Jan. 4.

End of the Eclipse - 1h. 35m.

Dig. eclipsed $20^{\circ} 56'$ from the north side of the $\odot$'s shadow.

The second will be an Eclipse of the Sun, visible though small, and will happen on Friday, Jan. 19, as under, D in m .

Beginning - 9h. 54m. morn.

Middle - - 10h. 33m.

End - - - 11h. 12m.

Dig. eclipsed $1^{\circ} 17'$ on $\odot$'s northern limb.

Observe, The D makes her first impression on the solar disc at 42° from $\odot$'s vertex on the right hand.

The third is likewise an Eclipse of the Sun, and visible to the inhabitants of this isle; it will happen on Friday, June 15, in the afternoon, D in II .

Beginning - 4h. 11m.

Middle - - 4h. 56m.

End - - - 5h. 47m.

Dig. eclipsed $5^{\circ} 24'$ on $\odot$'s northern limb.

D makes the first impression on the solar disc. at $88^{\circ} \frac{1}{2}$ from $\odot$'s vertex on the right hand.

The fourth will be an invisible Eclipse of the Moon, and will happen on Saturday, June 30, at mid-day; but as it will be a very remarkable one in several parts of the globe, I insert the following. D in W .

Beginning of the Eclipse 0h. 43m. afternoon.

Total darkness begins - 1h. 59m.

Middle - - - - 2h. 34m.

Total darkness ends - 3h. 10m.

Eclipse ends - - - 4h. 26m.

Dig. eclipsed $14^{\circ} 27'$ from north side of $\odot$'s shadow.

The fifth will be an Eclipse of the Sun, to us invisible, and will happen on Sunday, Dec. 9, as follows:

♂ at 4h 11m in long. $8^{\circ} 17' 36''$. ♀'s latitude $47^{\circ} \frac{1}{2}$ south. The Sun will be centrally eclipsed on the meridian at 4h. 20m. in longitude 65° west, and latitude 84° south.

The sixth and last Eclipse in the circuit of this year, will happen on Monday, Dec. 24; it will be a lunar one, and the latter end may be perceived in Great Britain as follows:

Beginning - 1h. 42m. afternoon.

Middle - - 3h. 7m.

♂ rises - - 3h. 52m.

End - - - 4h. 32m.

Dig. eclipsed $9^{\circ} 18'$ on the ♀'s northern limb.

Having given the times and quantities of each Eclipse, we shall in the next place humbly attempt at a modest judgment, from a scheme drawn and adapted to the time of the middle of the first Eclipse, viz. 11h. 47m. P. M. And here I find 7 deg. of Libra ascend, and 10 deg. of Cancer culminate. Sol and Venus are in the 4th house, Saturn in the 5th, Jupiter in the 8th, Luna eclipsed in the 10th, and Mars and Venus upon the 3d. The Moon suffers in her own house. I am sorry to say I expect some detriment to the female world; perhaps to the body by disease; perhaps to the mind by slander and foul report. The commonality appear affected with dropical and other sluggish disorders, and the r minds possessed with that kind of phrenzy which leads to commotions and internal broils; but ne Sutor ultra Crepidam. Politics have ever been a snare, even to the wisest; and yet the greatest fools have always been most apt to run their necks into it. Damages by water I much apprehend. When the hurricane arises,

“ Mutinous waters hurry the war,

“ And troops of waves come rolling from afar.”

Expect likewise a worse winter than you wish for. This some may attribute to the season, others to the eclipse; all I shall say is, Nemo semper sapit. And if time belies my predictions, I shall be very glad of it.

IT is with the greatest satisfaction that I have received the approbation of several worthy correspondents, for my introduction of several anecdotes of the different creeds; and and customs of those who call themselves disciples of the adorable Captain of our Salvation. This, say they, gives youth an opportunity of knowing what otherwise, in the recluse parts of the kingdom, and shut up from general society, they most probably might never have the advantage of looking into; while at the same time it convinces them of the blessings they enjoy in a land of liberty and gospel light, when compared with those of our brethren dispersed in different parts of the terraqueous globe, who still groan under the rod of tyranny, or tremble at the menaces of priestcraft. Nor will it I hope be unentertaining to the senior part of my readers, to recall to their memories what in the juvenile part of their lives they themselves have read with astonishment. I propose therefore, as far as my annual performance will permit, to pursue the thread of my discourse; and will take my beginning where the first-born of the human race, and afterwards the first fruits of them that sleep, took theirs.

ASIA, the subject of the earliest histories, the inclosure of Paradise, and the land of patriarchs, prophets, and ancient heroes; where all the miracles recorded in the sacred volumes of the Old and New Testament were performed; was the happy quarter where Christianity first beamed with celestial lustre. Here Christianity was first planted, and here in some measure she yet holds her seat; but in what manner shall be the subject of the following discourse, taken from the best authorities.

The Armenians have two patriarchs, many archbishops, bishops, and priests of different orders; some of which lead monastic lives, and are of the order of St. Basil. The Monk's way of living is very austere and mortified; and the whole people at least one half of the year, abstain from animal food and fish, refraining likewise, on every day set apart for a fast, from all sustenance until the evening, and then only indulge themselves with bread, roots or herbs. Nor even is sickness a sufficient plea for a dispensation, and instances have been known where the sick have refused nourishment to the absolute loss of their lives. Great Being! with what a madness have the priests inspired thy votaries, to make them ungratefully refuse the gracious bounties thy hand kindly stretcheth forth to the children of mortality; to deny by mortification the continuance of that life thou hast entrusted to their care, and make even suicide an act of devotion.

In respect to the last supper they are conformable to the Greek church; they administer in both kinds, but dip the bread in the wine; and to this communion children of two or three years old are admitted. The solemn festival of Lent, wherein fasting and prayer is particularly recommended by the church, and the passion week, have a form appropriated for every day; and the holy sacrament held forth on that of the crucifixion to all who repent them truly of their former sins, steadfastly purposing to lead a new life, and have a lively faith in God's mercy through the merits of the Redeemer, is a practice ancient and laudable. But here matters rather differ; for during Lent they do not celebrate the Lord's supper at all; nor does the priest say mass in public, but in a part of the church divided by a curtain for that purpose, where he repeats all the service in a low voice, except the gospel and creed which he repeats aloud.

The floors of their churches are covered with carpets, as the Armenians never enter with their shoes on; this I apprehend is in allusion to the mandate given by God to Moses, viz. Pull thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. — Their ceremonies of baptism, marriage, and burial, I purposely omit, and proceed to some of their particular tenets.

They deny the division of the divine and human nature in the person of Christ; asserting they are united as the soul and body of man.

They believe that the souls of the righteous after death will remain in a state of rest till the general judgment, without any other satisfaction than that which arises from a consciousness of a past life of virtue. We should from hence imagine that they suppose therefore the souls of the wicked would remain with only a horror for their past vices, till the great day of retribution, but herein is our mistake; for they believe the souls of wicked men after their separation from the body go immediately down to hell.

Several strange traditions are by them held as articles of faith; of which take the following:

They believe that during the pregnancy of the Virgin Mary, her sister Salome charged her with incontinency;
and

and the Virgin desiring he ^{to} lay her hand upon her belly, a flame of fire issued from ^{it} and consumed great part of her arm, but upon a second application it was immediately restored.

They also affirm, that Judas, after he had betrayed his Lord and Master, resolved to hang himself before our Saviour's crucifixion; and conceived great hopes that he should escape the punishment he so richly deserved, by being in hell at our Saviour's descension, who he believed would set free all the souls he should find there; but the devil, as knowing as Judas, held the scoundrel by the heel till Christ had visited the dreary mansion, and then let the rogue drop in once for all.

Proceed we next to the province of Georgia, a place of considerable extent, bounded by Circassia on the north, by Daghestan Tartary on the east, by Turcomania on the south, and by the Black Sea on the west; part subject to the Turks, and part to the Persians.

The prevailing religion of Georgia is undoubtedly the Christian, which the prince of the country is said to profess. But all we at present can say is, that they build their churches in remote places, and on the summit of high hills and mountains, as it were to be out of the way; that they have bells in them to call their congregations together, while they modestly content themselves with viewing them at a humble distance.

It is further observable, that here the clergy maintain themselves not by the living but by the dead; for at the death of a Georgian, the bishop demands one hundred crowns for performing the funeral rites; which exorbitant demand must be satisfied, although the wife and children should be sold to discharge it, which is too often the case. But the fee being received, he very generously lays a letter on the breast of the deceased, requiring St. Peter to admit his soul to the mansions of eternal bliss:

Mingrelia, which was anciently called Colchis, is bounded on the east by mount Caucasus, and the kingdom of Imaretta, on the south by part of the province of Georgia, on the west by the Black Sea, and on the north by Circassia.

The Mingrelians, though they profess Christianity, maintain the lawfulness of having a number of wives, on principles of interest; and assert that a numerous offspring s a blessing, because the sale of their children furnishes them with articles both of convenience and luxury. But if their progeny increases beyond their sale, they murder the young brood without remorse. With as little ceremony do they dispatch the aged, and the sick, when they are supposed to be past recovery.

The Mingrelians maintain that the Apostle Andrew preached the gospel here; and there is still a cathedral built of stone, and adorned with crosses and images enriched with jewels. However, when or where they received the light of the gospel, little boots it at this time, being now totally darkened in ignorance, irreverence, superstition, and bigotry. Their chief priest, called Catholikos, raises money by the sale of the children of the wretched dependents, and by visitations of the dioceses in his jurisdiction; charging six hundred crowns for the consecration of a bishop, and one hundred crowns for saying mass at the ordination of a common priest. These in their turn plunder the people committed to their care by oppression; selling their wives and children to slavery, and practising all kinds of wickedness, while at the same time they are so horribly ignorant, that they can scarce perform the offices of the church, nor do they attempt to preach or instruct the people; but abstaining from flesh with great perseverance, seem to include all the exercises of religion in that single article. Lastly, their prayers are addressed to the supreme Being through the medium of the images and idols of their own making, by whose interest with the Supreme Arbiter of all, they hope to obtain blessings for themselves, and distress, ruin, and damnation for those with whom they are at variance.

But as this present performance will admit no further upon this subject, I shall conclude with that excellent description of a depraved clergy, given by Milton in his beautiful Monody called Lycidas, where he well describes them in the following lines:

Blind mouths, that scarce themselves know how to hold
A sheep-hook, or have learnt ought else the least
That to the faithful herdsmen's art belongs;
What recks it them? What need they? They are sped;
And when they list, their lean and flashy songs
Grate on their scrannel pipes of wretched straw;

The

The hungry sheep look up, and are not fed,
 But swol'n with wind, and the rank mist they draw,
 Rot inwardly, and foul contagion spread;
 Besides what the grim wolf with privy paw
 Daily devours apace, and nothing said,
 But that two handed engine at the door
 Stands ready to smite once, and smite no more.

Proceed we now to some contemplations upon the seasons; and first,

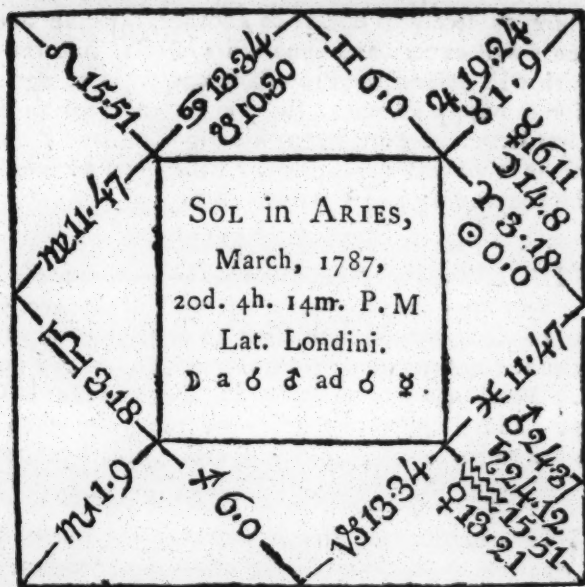

OF THE WINTER QUARTER.

THIS quarter begins on the 21st day of December, at half past two in the afternoon, the Sun then touching upon the first scruple of Capricorn, making our longest nights and shortest days; and continues till the 20th of March, when entering upon the equinoctial once more he reduces day and night to an equality. In examining the scheme for this quarter I find 10 deg. of aërial Twins to ascend, and 6 deg. of Aquarius upon the medium cœli; the regal Jupiter is retrograde in Taurus, as likewise are both Mercury and Venus in Capricorn. I apprehend more debates than resolutions in the councils of state; and this is the season for laying plans, rather than putting them in execution. Many designs will be upon the carpet, much canvassing, and no small share of frustration. We may hear too of complaints made, and redress promised; but when the grievances are to be relieved I do not find that the stars have yet determined. If among the nations England has its share of business upon its hands, it is not to be wondered at; if no more than its share, it is not to be repined at. May the great ruler of this realm have the heartfelt satisfaction to find that his senators are endowed with wisdom, honesty, and resolution, and the great council of the nation with loyalty, integrity, and unanimity.

OF THE SPRING QUARTER.

THE vernal or spring quarter commences on Tuesday, March 20, about a quarter past 4 in the afternoon, when he climbing again toward the northern regions, once more reaches the verge of Aries. The face of the heavens appears at this time as follows:

He who placed them for signs had no sooner appointed them their proper course, but they began their business. Whatever the Father of the human race by intuitive knowledge understood of these things, I pretend not to determine. This I know, that the experience of above five thousand years has handed it down to us, from Adam to Noah, and from him to the present day; nor is there nation or language where their voice has not been heard among them; but the reason that so few votaries to this science are known, is this: He sits him down in silence, and despising sound without sense, laughs at the folly of the present age, and enjoys the solid satisfaction of viewing both what is past and what is to come. As few words to such an one will suffice, they will see that the heavens do not appear with the most promising face; that 6 deg. of Gemini are on the medium cœli, while 11 deg. 47 min. of Virgo are ascending; Saturn in the 6th house, which is an infortune, is of himself strong, having both a habitation and triplicity in Aquarius; he is not only powerful, but whoever examines the aspects in the ephemeris, will find him more busy than could be wished. In the affairs of nations however, methinks he is impartial, and deals out his ill-nature ill-nature as freely to one as to another. Rome and its adherents will experience some of its effects, but the God of Truth will defend the Protestant cause. Let age prepare for a happy eternity, for the present year promises them but little. Saturn keeps his dignities and is predominant to the year's end; so as little need be said, and this the concluding page, we hasten to

THE SUMMER QUARTER.

WHICH begins June 21, 2h. 6m. afternoon. The Sun then entering the first scruple of Cancer, when 30 deg. of Cancer culminate, and 22 deg. 38 min. of Libra ascend. Saturn now runs retrograde to any good I doubt. Much news is expected, little comes that is satisfactory. This I apprehend not to be the year when our swords are to be beat into ploughshares. But I proceed to

THE AUTUMNAL QUARTER.

THIS quarter commences Sept. 23, at about three quarters past three in the morning, the Sun then once more balancing day with night. Whoever forms a true scheme of the heavens for this ingress, will find 29 deg. of Taurus in M. C. and 6 deg. 39 min. of Virgo ascend, and Saturn still retrograde. Little more need be said, damages by land and by sea will certainly happen. Many things expected will come to pass, and if some things unexpected betide not the world, I err in my judgment. The aspects at the close of the year are not, I must own, of the most favourable disposition; I however hope no heavy clouds of calamity hang over our British Isles. We, thank heaven, are not reduced to David's choice; nor the sword, the pestilence, or famine rages through the land. Let but a sense of benefits received inspire our hearts with gratitude to our kind Benefactor, and a consciousness of our mutual dependance upon each, unite us together in love and unanimity; and we may depend upon the protection of that divine Being whose eyes are over all his works; who is the God of truth, and the protector of the Protestant cause.
